Each parent participates one day each week. Evening meetings are scheduled during the year, with speakers and discussions pertaining to a variety of child development topics. Other social activities are planned to give the parents a chance to get acquainted.

This year some partial scholarships will be available to families who qualify. Applications can be obtained from Melinda Martin at 1140 9th st., Albany, 525-2800.

Parents interested in the fall program may contact Maheran Razak, 527-6686 or Pam Ormsby, 524-6080. Registration will be at the school on Thursday evening, Sept. 9, from 6:30-8 p.m. and Friday morning, Sept. 10, 9:30-10:30 a.m.

RUSD transfer requests attend secondary school in Berkeley for 1982-83, Dorsey said, but the district grants more transfers at the elementary level because of child care arrangements which present special hardships.

The Albany school district, however, is less strict about transfers and proof of residency. Assistant superintendent Richard Rosenquist said parents have to fill out forms and "we rather hate to challenge those."

Albany requires proof in the form of utility receipts or other documents only when there is good reason for suspicion, he said.

And Albany is more likely than Berkeley to grant transfers as long as there is still room.

"We do want a school that is reasonably full," Rosenquist said. "They are welcome if space is available."

One reason for the difference between the two districts is the way they are funded. Some districts have a fixed income, others are paid according to the number of students attending.

"If we have more kids we generate more dollars," Rosenquist said.

But Berkeley has been on a guaranteed revenue and the enrollment has not made a difference in the funding. There is no reason under that system for Berkeley to look for more students.

Albany so far has not noticed a substantial increase in requests for interdistrict transfers, but some Richmond residents say students are signing up, especially at the Albany Middle School (grades six through eight) with false addresses.

Rosenquist said the district has no way of knowing that was taking place, but, he said, the Middle School is "pretty close to full."

At John Swett Unified School District reported that transfer requests from the Albany district are about equal to the district and about the same as last year.

The good word

Son, that the promise of life in heaven can be received only through Him, and that because of his death and resurrection we can be changed from sinfulness to godliness. The invitation of Jesus is also to devote ourselves to living for Him always, in obedience to Him in all things, above everything else.

But it is a matter of perspective and commitment. For many, the invitation of Jesus, taken seriously, is too demanding. It appears to be laced with risks. What if Jesus isn't who he claimed to be? What if my devotion turns and makes me a laughing-stock for having ever trusted in Him?

But for those who are walking the tightrope of full commitment to Christ, it seems to them they are walking an easy way. Like Peter when he walked on the water, when he looked through his eyes to Christ and came to the shore with confidence, when we look at the taint of our sin, we begin to sink.

What is your personal commitment? Jesus is to come with us, look through His eyes, and decide to strengthen our commitment to him, and fall.

The hot tub fracas

responded to a call at U.S.S. Tubs since May 16, when a Novato man was found dead with $2,500 worth of cocaine in his possession.

"If I had an investigation going on, I'd tell you 'I can't say anything,'" he said.

In his letter, Zweben also asked the chief to supply him with information about an elderly Berkeley woman who was attacked Aug. 26 by a Richmond police dog near the Gateway condominium complex. Zweben and Simmons have clashed in the past over the referral of such matters to the city's risk management team.

Hughes, the owner of the popular hot tub store on San Pablo Avenue, called the rumored accounts of a sex-related activity at the store "absurd" and "ridiculous."

"We've never even had an arrest for drunk and disorderly, like all the bars on San Pablo," he said.

"We have a huge sign in the lobby that says we offer non-sexual massage only," Hughes said. New customers are routinely informed that the massage offered is non-sexual, he added.

"If I ever was going to open one (a sex-related business), I would be on earth that I would be in Albany," he said. Hughes said police were lowering a minor violation about a month ago. He responded after a while he wanted extra time would not pay for the argument. An argument ensued, and the man eventually left the office with his friends. Hughes said the man was called, and the man away.

City mulls crossing guard

By STEPHEN BUEL

ALBANY — The city's Traffic and Safety Commission has suggested three street corners where the city might save money by eliminating a school crossing guard.

The city council was scheduled to decide whether to hold a public hearing on the fate of the crossing guards last Tuesday, but a small and emotional crowd of parents and crossing guards turned the council's discussion itself into a public hearing.

The crossing guard program is one of about 10 programs the council has been looking at for ways to save money. The council had asked the city's Traffic and Safety Commission to study how the city might reduce the expenses of the crossing guard program, and Tuesday night it received the commission's reply.

"We were unanimous in our feeling that the program is necessary," wrote Susan Sanderson, the head of the commission. "Our discussion focused primarily on ways the program might be streamlined without sacrificing the safety it affords our children."

The commission picked three intersections that the council could save money on: Marin at Sante Fe, which is now staffed by two guards; Marin at Cornell and Talbot, which are only a block apart and could perhaps be consolidated; and Solano at Cornell and Talbot, which are also just a block apart.

But the traffic commission concluded that students should not be used as crossing guards because Albany's split school sessions would require them to spend too much time out of the classroom.

According to Sanderson, the commission's decision was hampered by the absence of Chief of Police James Simmons or a representative of the crossing guard program. Simmons wrote the council last week stating his objection to any cuts in the program.

The council's reaction to the traffic commission's report varied greatly, though everyone appeared to agree that student crossing guards are unfeasible. The council directed the city's staff to study the proposal, and report back by Oct. 4.

Council member Edward McManus said he was interested in the consolidations, and suggested the council hold a public hearing after the commission's proposal is studied.

But the council rejected McManus' motion to hold a public hearing, with council members McManus and Kruse voting for the hearing, Johns and Ganong voting against, and Rotramel abstaining.

"This matter has been suggested for three years now, and it either been pooh-poohed away or put off," said McManus, who was perturbed by the council's decision. He said the council needs to make all the cuts it can, because next year's city budget has a built-in $230,000

"We have a budget that we can't live on," he said. "If we walk away from the $8,000," he said. "If we walk away from the $8,000," he said. "If we walk away from the $8,000," he said.

Parents: Busing must be all ye

By BARBARA ERICKSON
Staff Writer

The Richmond Unified school board's decision to restore two months of safety busing in local schools is not enough, according to irate parents who say they will take their case to Sacramento.

"We're working on getting organized and getting our busing back," said Linda Wilde, an El Sobrante School parent. "We want it back for the full year."

Meanwhile, on the orders of Superintendent Richard Lovette, 10 school crossing guards were back at their posts Thursday afternoon and this morning. Lovette called out the guards after the city of Richmond cut them from the budget and failed to reinstate them in spite of protests.

Mrs. Wilde marched along Hilltop Drive to El Sobrante School with a group of 80 parents and children Wednesday morning to protest the loss of safety busing for 1,200 students in the district. The school board cut $400,000 in funds for the program this summer when the district faced a $5 million shortfall.

As the parents began their march, 7-year-old Corey Chapell, who rode the buses to school last year, was struck and killed by a car on Giant Road across from Lake Elementary School. His death brought a big crowd to the school board meeting Wednesday night where the panel was scheduled to discuss the possible restoration of safety busing.

On a 4-1 vote, with board member Frank Carlton dissenting, the board allocated $100,000 in reserve funds to keep the buses rolling for two months. During that time school staff will work with the parents and Patchett's Bus Co. to find other ways of getting the children in hazardous areas to school — through car pools or parent-paid private busing.

But parents are saying the two months plan is inadequate.

"I was very displeased with the board's action," said Eula Conwright, a Parchester Village resident who drove her granddaughter to Lake School Thursday. "I feel we will have to go through the same thing in two months."

Parents say car pooling will not work because it raises insurance rates for auto owners and because it is a "hassle" for working parents and those with emergencies like sick children.

They say a private busing plan is too expensive and not enough families will take part to keep the costs down. Patchett's officials, who met with parents and school officials about the family-paid plan last month, said the cost would run from $1 to $4 per child each day depending on how much the buses are used and occupied.

So parents are talking about organizing to look for other solutions.

"We're going to keep stirring up action," said Pam Bockus, a Marie Murphy parent. "Our only recourse is to hit the Legislature."

Henry Hornsby, president of the Parchester Civic and Improvement Association, said he will soon organize a meeting of his group to decide what steps to take. He also said the community will have to look Sacramento for help.

"We will petition the Legislature," said Mrs. Wilde. "We will try to get (Gov.) Brown to call a special session of the Legislature."

Parents are hoping to call a meeting Monday night at El Sobrante School, she said, to get started on the lobbying effort.

Mrs. Wilde said the money for busing went to paying for increased insurance rates for district employees. "We'll try to get them to switch insurance plans," she said, when the new contracts come up next year.

Eliza Johnson of the Parchester Neighborhood Association said the money for busing is tied up in frills and the district should stick to teaching the basics.

Even during segregation times in the South, she said, children were bused to school. She said, "It is the whole system that got us like this," and added that Parchester needs a school of its own, at least one close to the community.

School board president Eddis Harrison said the parents who expect to get money for busing from the Legislature are going to find it rough going.

The lawmakers will not reconvene until December, she said, and even if they agree to an increase for the schools at that time, this will not free up funds for busing.

According to the district's contract with the teachers, any increase in revenues must be met with a salary raise. This will eat up any surplus and even put the district in the red, officials say.

"I wonder how long it's going to take for reality to set in," Mrs. Har-ison said. "The money just comes forth this year."

She added, "We need it to help them with it."

The district is in a confrontation with the teachers union over the contract for 10 of 19 crossing guards. When the week and failed to get guards, Superintendent Lovette ordered guards laid off.

A decade of BART Anniversary party set for Monday in Oakland

By JOHN ADAMS
Staff Writer

A birthday cake, a Dixieland band and a colorful photo exhibit will all be part of BART's gala 10th anniversary party Monday.

The public has been invited to join the transit district at its Oakland headquarters in celebrating 10 years of successful rail operation.

"I hope everyone will be our guests at this wonderful celebration," said BART president Eugene Garfinkle. "We have come a long way."

At 9 a.m. a huge photo exhibit depicting BART's history and growth will be unveiled on the green next to the BART offices at 800 Madison St., and at 10 a.m. a Dixieland Band from the Marriott Hotel in Santa Clara will strike up music for BART's birthday fete guests.

The official ceremony, beginning at 11, includes introductions and remarks that will end with the cake-cutting.

The cake will be shaped like two trains in a huge number 10.

At noon BART will host an open house with tours of the Central Control, and movies will be shown reviewing the construction and concept of the rail system.

It was on Sept. 11, 1972, when Gertrude Guild of Oakland put her ticket into a BART fare gate at the Lake Merritt Station and became the transit system's first paying passenger. By the end of the day nearly persons 12,000 had ridden the 9 trains then in service between the Fremont and MacArthur Stations.

The concept of BART dates to much earlier days. An Army Corps of Engineers study recommended a transbay tube in 1947 to relieve the crowded Bay Bridge.

And as early as 1920, Bay Area newspapers reported a plan by the father of the Panama Canal, Gen. George Goethals, to build a transbay tube.

But all these early plans were ephemeral dreams until 1957, when the Legislature created the Rapid Transit District in the present Transbay area.

President Lyndon B. Johnson signed over the ground to Contra Costa County. Following the opening of the first BART train in 1973, the Contra Costa line opened in May of 1973.

And BART began the bay tube Sept. 11, 1972.

Today, BART is one of its scheduled ridership has grown. The number of passengers transported has increased since 1975, or from 190,000.

Today, BART has 100 million annual passengers and the rail system carries 350 million passengers a year.

ALBANY UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT today announced its policy for free and reduced price meals for children unable to pay the full price of meals served under the National School Lunch and Breakfast Programs.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility for free and reduced price meals.

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free meals.

An additional statement is added to warn that the application is being made in connection with the school's financial needs, that school officials may verify the information on the application, and that deliberate misstatements may subject the applicant to prosecution under applicable state and criminal laws.

In certain cases, foster children are also eligible for free or reduced price meals. If a family is living with them and wishes to apply for meals for them the family should contact the school principal. Under the provisions of the policy, John E. Fike, Assistant Superintendent of Business Services, will determine eligibility. If parents are dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, they may make a request either orally or in writing to Dr. Goldstone, Superintendent, 526-6441, Albany, CA 94706 for a hearing to appeal the decision.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the family should contact the principal for a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for additional income falls at or below the levels shown above.

In the operation of child feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of national origin, age, or handicap.

Each school and the office of the Assistant Superintendent of Business Services limit to policy which may be reviewed by an interested party.
